O Al-ma Mater, weaver mother Spins a web of lasting love, A fabric in whose lustrous pattern Shining threads are ever wove; The sapphire blue for lake and heaven, beside the green of stately pine, And blended with the sunset crimson Wellesley friendships golden shine.

The Drama of '28

ACT ONE

TIME: Spring of Freshman year.

SCENE: A large Freshman dining room. Deafening noise, no longer naively questioning. Absence of looks of wide-eyed wonder. Sophisticated laughter. Blasé elbows on table tops. A few fragments of conversation heard above the rattle of china.

"What time does that orientation lecture begin?" . . . "Lecture? Who said . . ." "Let's not go to the old lecture. Let's go to the movies . . ." "Should we . . ." "Who's the Senior who drives that ADORABLE green roadster? . . ." "Oh, I know HER. *She gave . . ." "Tric dress you're wearing tonight, Jane . . ." "Where did she . . ." "*THIS thing? Wore it ages ago to C. A. Reception. Spilled punch . . ." "Oh, DO *you remember . . ." "I never got a taste of that punch. I bet I struggled an hour for . . ." "Did you hear that . . ." "*NOT Pres Pen . . ." ". . . on the day we were hazed . . ." "Oooh, really did . . ."

Bell rings sharply. Sudden silence . . .

HOUSE MOTHER (rising): Girls, couldn't we have a little more quiet in the dining room? The noise really has been—there's been too much noise. (She clears her throat) I wanted to speak of something which of course you all know about—the Semi-Centennial Pageant which is to take place in two—yes, it is, isn't it—two weeks. We all feel deeply honored that we are to have some share in this—ah—great event, and we want to regard it as an honor. Some of you have been given the privilege of cuting classes in order to rehearse your parts, but I've been told that you are somewhat abusing this privilege. I think we really ought to be reverent toward this occasion—so don't—that is, you really ought not to cut classes when it isn't necessary. (Clears her throat) Of course, you know that there will be many alumnae here, and that means a problem in housing. Some of you will have to double up—I know you won't mind—(Faint murmur of protest. House mother looks anxiously about.)

STUDENT (clearly and complainingly): I can't sleep in a strange room. I just can't do it.

HOUSE MOTHER (looking as if she were about to cry): Oh, dear—I don't know what to do. I suppose everything will be upset. I ought not to ask you to move around, but Miss Tufts says it is imperative. Well, we'll just do the best we can. (She sighs and sits down, too disheartened to say more.)

CURTAIN

ACT TWO

SCENE: A room in the Ad Building. Meeting of student-faculty committee. Four members of the faculty seated on hard chairs.

PROF. A.: These girls are always late. I can remember the time when my mother used to put soap in my mouth if I failed to be punctual. The soap didn't taste very good, but I . . .
(Enter two students, very much excited.)

FIRST STUDENT: The banner is gone—our banner is gone. I saw it just a second before it disappeared, but it's gone now . . .

SECOND STUDENT: Yes, it's gone all right. Somebody will be murdered for this.

PROF B. (severely): I think we might discuss the business of the moment. As it is we waste too much time talking about such things as banners and cigarettes. No wonder it's a struggle to get a scholarly attitude here. (Flourishing her handkerchief) I've dismissed three classes this week, because they were so stupid—stupid—
(Enter third student. Orchids on her fur collar. Stands panting to get her breath. Prof. C. unwinds his legs from the arm of his chair. Attempting to rise, puts one leg in waste basket. Extricates himself meditatively.)

THIRD STUDENT: Am I late? Am I really?

(Coldly reproachful glances from faculty.)

Well, it's this new 7.30 rule, and it really is heavenly. I'm so sorry I'm late, but think of having a whole hour more in town, and not having to rush for the 6.25—think of—

(First student pokes her in the ribs.)

FIRST STUDENT: Sh! They're going to say something.

PROF. D. (looking down meditatively over his glasses): My dear children, we've decided after considerable deliberation, that you may have your fun. The smoking rule may be changed so that you will be able to smoke to your hearts' content anywhere inside—

PROF. C. (apparently coming out of a trance): *Out*side. . (Subsides into trance.)

PROF. D.: Yes, outside I should say—outside the boundaries of Wellesley and Natick. That's a generous decision, my dears, don't you think so? (Addressing third student) Don't you, Margaret? That's a beautiful orchid on your coat.

THIRD STUDENT (confused): The orchid—I mean the decision is wonderful.

FIRST TWO STUDENTS (in unison): Simply wonderful!

PROF. B.: We don't think you ought to smoke at all. We're not making this a moral sanction. Heaven forbid! Why should anyone waste time smoking when he might be brushing up his intellect?

PROF. A: It all depends on your age. I used to smoke corn silk cigarettes in the woodshed. But that was a long time ago.

CURTAIN

ACT THREE

SCENE: A faculty-student luncheon. Jovial good nature on part of faculty. Imitation of jovial good nature on part of students. Anxiety on part of latter to pass salt and pepper to faculty.

PROF. B.: That sixteenth century float last night was not quite in keeping with the period, but it was very pleasant to look at. I'll say that much in praise of it.

FIRST STUDENT (timidly): '28 won Float Night.

SECOND STUDENT: Yes, wasn't that great? It was such a close race. (She stops, wondering if the faculty could possibly be interested.)

FIRST STUDENT (gathering courage): The race last year was closer. We've won two years in success. Think of that!

PROF. D.: A good record, my dear. May I have some vinegar, Mabel?

PROF. B.: I'm afraid girls are losing their more charming feminine traits.

PROF C. (stirring coffee with a fork): Woman is always woman. Her inhibitions keep her essentially feminine.

PROF. A.: That might be fallacious. During my pigtail age, I beat up all the little boys in the neighborhood, and got a lot of satisfaction out of doing it, too.

PROF. D.: Well, my children, I've no doubt you've got tomboy qualities, but I'll defend you. There must be some motherly instincts in you or you couldn't hold the position of Vill Junior.

(Second student chokes on piece of bread.)

PROF. B.: Is this new system working well?

SECOND STUDENT (slightly red in the face): Yes, very well. It's nice to get acquainted with the Freshmen. They're so—so helpless.

PROF. C.: The young are plastic.

PROF. B.: They certainly need to be looked after. When you stop and consider how much freedom they have. This new rule—

PROF. D.: What's that? Oh, you mean increasing the territory in the 9.45 rule. Well, now, I don't know. We ought to be liberal with the children. The poor dears can't be tied to apron strings forever. They have to play now and then. You agree, don't you, Mabel? Have some more celery, my dear.

PROF. C.: It's a liberal age, and it is likewise sophisticated, but even so, woman is always woman.

THIRD STUDENT (irrelevantly, feeling she must contribute to the conversation): The Sophomores won the tug of war in Longfellow Pond last week. (Faculty looks blank at first) You—you know—the tug of war. They pull—

PROF. B. (significantly): I should say that the tomboy qualities are predominant in girls. The facts all substantiate my statement.

PROF. C. (pouring vinegar into his coffee): Even so, woman is always woman. The essential feminine . . .

CURTAIN

ACT FOUR

SCENE: The gloom of a still spring evening. Class supper is just over, and a few girls sit on the steps of Alumnae Hall, looking mournfully at each other.

FACTOTUM: Isn't it appalling? This is the end—almost the end.

CLASS TREASURER (sadly): I pulled two grey hairs out of my head this morning. Do you feel old, too?

CHORUS (gloomily): Oh, ye-e-es.

CLASS PRESIDENT: But think of our Field Day record, this year especially.

SECRETARY: Wasn't it glorious? But next thing we know our children will be rolling hoops down Tower Court hill.

FACTOTUM: Our children! You certainly do look ahead. Maybe by that time they'll have smoking rooms here.

CLASS PRESIDENT (viciously): And a general examination in our minor subject, probably. Two general exams—think of it! (shudders) To my dying day I'll remember what Miss Pendleton said. "The class of nineteen twenty-eight is to be congratulated . . ."

CHORUS (groaning): Congratulated!

SECRETARY: Imagine using that word—the word you really use for something joyous.

CLASS TREASURER: Like engagements for instance. You know, I don't think Senior Prom had the usual domestic atmosphere this year. If people were engaged they weren't blatant about it.

CLASS PRESIDENT: Oh, I don't know. I thought there were too many couples mooning around. Gosh, some of them couldn't even eat.

SECRETARY: Well, of course, it's rather natural when you come right down to it. Under some circumstances you can't act naturally. What about you—I guess you soaked two handkerchiefs at last step singing.

CLASS PRESIDENT: Maybe I did. It was so doggone dramatic—leaving Chapel steps. And we had to march as if it were a funeral.

CLASS TREASURER (sniffling): It's all too sad. I haven't laughed for a week.

FACTOTUM: Well, after all, this is a great moment. We have quite matured and we've reached the peak. We are the ones who shall go out and take the world by storm.

(The whole group nods slowly and solemnly in silent agreement.)

Ready for Action

Eugene Gladstone O'Neill

An adventurer in life—an adventurer in art! It is what we should all like to be; and so we feel it splendidly appropriate to have the honor of enrolling Eugene O'Neill, the most daring of American playwrights, in the ranks of the class of 1928.

He began the adventure of life on October 16, 1888, in New York City. He served an intensive seven years' apprenticeship in wandering, journeying with father and mother all over the United States—for his father, James O'Neill, was a noted actor, and toured the country with a stage version of Monte Cristo. In 1906 Eugene O'Neill entered Princeton, but, because of some prank, was asked to leave for a year, before he had taken his freshman finals. Freedom once tasted was good—he had no desire to return to college life.

In 1909 he went to Spanish Honduras, Central America, with a mining engineer, to prospect for gold—the beginning of a period of life which might have been drawn from the novels of his early favorites, London, Kipling and Conrad. Honduras gave him, instead of gold, a malarial fever that sent him home again, and—the jungle, which quietly bided its time until The Emperor Jones should lose his way in it.

On his return to America he toured the East and Middle West with a theatrical troupe, and then was off again, on a sixty-five day trip to Buenos Aires, aboard a Norwegian barque. It was a long enough trip to saturate him with the sea which forms the background of Ile, In the Zone, The Moon of the Caribbees, and many more of his plays.

In Argentina, he wandered discontentedly from one job to another, until he suddenly shipped for South Africa as a mule tender. He was not allowed to land there, because he was penniless (a frequently recurring state of affairs with him). Back in Buenos Aires, destitute, and with no desire for work, he loafed around the docks, making the acquaintance of sailors, wastrels, outcasts. At last he decided to return home, and shipped as ordinary seaman on a British steamer. On the steamer he found the germ of Beyond the Horizon in a Norwegian A.B., who had left home to go to sea, and now continually cursed the sea—affectionately, and with no desire to return to a landsman's ease and safety.

In New York, O'Neill lived at Jimmy the Priest's, a waterfront dive peopled by down-and-outers. He found it a treasure-house. As Johnny the Priest's it became the setting for Anna Christie. Christopherson, Anna's father, lived there, in actual flesh and blood, sharing O'Neill's room. Christopherson hated the sea, but could not leave her because he was dependent on her for his living. Driscoll the stoker turned up at Jimmy the Priest's—a tough, Liverpool Irishman, who one day jumped overboard in mid-ocean.

The search for the key to the riddle of Driscoll's suicide engendered The Hairy Ape.

There were a few more adventures, before O'Neill became cub reporter on the New London Telegraph. His work was not exceptional, but it gave him good technical training. Six months of reporting—then his health broke down and he was ordered to a sanitarium. In spite of his strenuous adventuring he had never been very strong and now was forced to take a five months' rest. For the first time he found leisure in which to consider and order his crowded experiences. In the process he found the desire to write, to carry his love of adventure into art, to give back to the world the intense, varied images, emotions and ideas which he had absorbed.

After leaving the sanitarium he spent a year building up his health, reading,—and writing. In the fall of 1913, he wrote his first play, The Web. He quickly discovered his need of more technical training, and in 1914 enrolled in Professor Baker's 47 Workshop. The association with Professor Baker brought him encouragement and help. The next winter was spent in Greenwich Village, meeting some of the real inhabitants, negroes and Italians. In the summer of 1916, O'Neill went to Provincetown, where he found a group of actors eager for new and promising material; they gave the first production of one of his plays, Bound East for Cardiff. The young dramatist found a stage and an audience with which he might experiment to his heart's desire—he tested them out thoroughly. At the end of the summer the actors organized as the Provincetown Players, and opened a theater in New York, where most of O'Neill's plays were first produced.

In 1917 and 1918, the Smart Set printed several of his plays, thus giving him the widest public recognition he had as yet received. In 1920, with the production of Beyond the Horizon, he took his place as the leading American dramatist, at the age of thirty-two. With this play, he turned from the one-act to the longer form, in which he has done excellent work. The production of Marco Millions at the Guild Theater fulfills an early ambition to have the first production of a play "on Broadway." The Great God Brown, Marco Millions, and The Strange Interlude are such new departures that they suggest that O'Neill will adventure still further in many directions. We may be too close to him to be able to evaluate him adequately, but Europe also acclaims him as our foremost dramatist. Moscow, Prague, and Vienna, as well as other European capitals greet his plays delightedly, as the defeat of old and binding traditions. He is the embodiment of that freedom and sense of adventure which is youth itself—which we are so apt to lose with physical youth,—which we can only retain as we perpetuate mental youth.

College Government

Our brief reign can claim place beside the great year 1848 for the cataclysmic overthrow of governments, only we struck death at the heart of the democratic ideal to which they had given birth. With the callous indifference of youth, we felt four score years a ripe age for the grave; so with slight pangs at the remembrance of the happy rule that ushered in our freshman year, we clipped the wings of our rather senile and impotent democracy and buried them with the due ceremony of an all-college referendum e'er the spring of our junior year. We took not a little pride in feeling we, at least, recognized and dealt squarely with this outworn and inefficient form of government, modelled after the two-chamber system of our national Congress. The still popularly elected Senate with its Lord of the Bed Chamber (bearing a high title and within the call that rarely comes) and the Elastic Student Committee, still carries some of the markings of a democratic institution, but it is quite willing under examination to admit its true oligarchical character. However, we do not press the point, for our maxim is to be as little seen and heard and felt as possible in our well-ordered and extraordinary community.

Less fundamental organically, though of more vital interest to some members of our group were other changes, such as the smoking rule. That was indeed a bitter fought battle! And the field at the final victory after a seven months' conflict was strewn with the bodies of student sub-committees and faculty super-committees and a mortally wounded House of Representatives, but the clouds of smoke were to roll no nearer to the campus precincts than the boundaries of Natick and Wellesley. Although thoroughly pleased with the legislation, we are not blind to the possibility that another generation may decide that this too shall pass away.

Our memories are peculiarly short. Many of us have already forgotten that there was a time when you could not drive in an automobile on Sunday night after 7.30, even in the town of Wellesley; that no golf or tennis was allowed of a Sunday afternoon; that there was a season when a corps of amateur student police patrolled the campus with large official-looking buttons on their chests, keeping pedestrians to the straight and narrow path, and that once upon a time the seniors held the guiding reins of the freshmen in the Village, not the juniors as the present practice has it. We feel not unlike Heraclitus who could never step twice into the stream of life and meet the same water. Probably it is because we instigated the reforms ourselves that we feel them worthy to hand on to Wellesley posterity.

Barnswallows Association

1927-1928

Senior year—and fancy what Barn started out with—a change in the constitution! Incomprehensible! The Business Board had grown suddenly in size and importance, making Barn a two-board government, with Jean Poindexter, '28, the first nine-point Business Manager. This new Business Board takes over many new duties and problems, and includes within it three former committees: Business, Publicity and Service (more top-hat name than the old Food Committee, yes?) The ground to be covered has been organized and planned ahead for the entire year as it is on the Executive Board. But with the added requirement—which was thought to be a step forward in making Barn a theatre workshop in business as well as the technical side—that members of each committee must have a knowledge of the duties of the other committees and be ready to work together and to assist when one was particularly hard pressed. So that the total result will be accomplished, not by three separately working units, but by one Business Board.

In thus drawing itself up more compactly, the Business Board may only be said to have taken the cue from the Drama Committee. This group, headed by Helen Steers, '28, planned to unify and organize the creative work of Barn under the theatre workshop ideal. And as it was the year for a Shakespeare play in June and with the Stratford-on-Avon Theatre requesting contributions from American colleges, it was decided to plan the work of the first semester with Shakespeare as the guiding spirit. The informals were to lead up to a Shakespeare production for Fall Play instead of June Play, so that the Barnswallows' contribution to this famous theatre might be sent after Christmas.

FALL INFORMALS. Shaw's Dark Lady of the Sonnets, Gammer Gurton's Needle, Will Shakespeare, by Clement Dane, with Elsbeth Thexton, '28.

FALL FORMAL. (Barn picks 'em easy!) William Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice. A stunningly simple and appealingly modern version, with color effects so lovely one missed even a single Alumna sigh for a June night and Tupelo. Starring two of Barn's "Broadway Bound" actresses, Norma Holtzmann, '30, in a Shylock to be long remembered with awe, and Helen Steers, '28, in a Portia made for dreams and Shakespeare idealists.

And the rest is to be shown soon . . .

A check for $800 was sent to the Stratford-on-Avon Theatre from our prosperous Merchant. Patience, another Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, will come the end of March followed by a long delayed Class Competition, and perhaps an original play. And for June play—who knows or even dreams, least of all the Drama Committee. Probably another one of those light, comfortable plays like He Who Gets Slapped or Electra—perhaps The Strange Interlude? It's a hard working star that pulls the Barn wagon. May more dramatic organizations see the firmament in all its glory!

Fall 1924-Spring 1927

1924—1925

FALL INFORMALS. They gave two original plays to impress us: Marion Klein's, '25, Clarion Call and Una Ritchie's The End of the Feud. Also Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil, by Stuart Walker. And Poems in Pantomime adapted from Austin Dobson.

FALL PLAY. The Yellow Jacket. Those Fascinating Chinese!

OPERETTA. The Knight in Poverty, by Mary L. Robinson, '25, with Carol Perrin and other idols. And the PAGEANT! We felt proud to be the last to claim an active part in it. The Winged Soul, by Marie W. Potter, '07, with Ellen Bartlett, '27, in the title role. Probably the greatest dramatic production ever attempted by the college.

1925—1926

FALL INFORMALS. With yet another original fantasy, The Horns of the Moon, by Eloise Smith, '26. Also Lord Dunsany's Golden Doom and Mauthrin Dondo's The Pie and The Tart.

FALL FORMAL. The Cradle Song, by G. Marting de Sierra, featuring Elsbeth Thexton, '28, and Ellen Bartlett, '27.

SPRING INFORMALS nobly made up the lack of an operetta with Where the Whirlwind Blows, From Soup to Savory and Pierrot in Paris.

JUNE PLAY. The School for Scandal, by Sheridan with four wonderful settings and Maggie McCarty as Charles.

1926—1927

FALL INFORMALS. Shaw's Man of Destiny, Rosalind, by J. M. Barrie and Checkov's Marriage Proposal.

FALL FORMAL. A strenuous effort with Andreyev's He Who Gets Slapped, marked by the success of Maggie McCarty, Helen Steers and Elsbeth Thexton, all '28.

OPERRETTA. The criticized Pinafore, but the audiences liked it, especially Virginia Edwards, Jean Poindexter and the famous Maggie.

SPRING INFORMALS. Gladys Meyer's prize play, Hans Wurst, the Lion Tamer and our New York competition play, The Stronger.

JUNE PLAY. An exquisite Electra of Euripedes.

Athletics

Mary Hemenway surely was a heaven for 1928's enthusiastic athletes, and although our verdant hue was quickly changed to red at the donning of angel robes,—well, it was our class color anyway, and all emerged with a religious determination to paint the playing fields with it. In this valiant spirit, no mild form of battle would suffice, and most of us elected crew, basketball or hockey. With modesty becoming in new-comers, we restrained ourselves from taking higher than third place in the fall Field Day. In the Indoor Gym Meet, however, after a winter courageously spent in curbing balky "horses," and defying evil fortune by propelling ourselves under ladders, we triumphed over our natural enemies, the sophomores. The glow of many Japanese lanterns under a May sky dazzled us so that we could only bring up the rear in the crew races. But we came to ourselves sufficiently to give a real battle-cry when our president christened our boat Okitata, Leader of Warriors.

Our second fall found modesty discarded. Upset that our plans for winning in every department were thwarted by the new system of division into fall and spring sports, we could do no better than tie with the seniors and freshmen. And generously we allowed our big sisters, the seniors to celebrate their last year by winning the fall crew competition. But from this time on success adorned our colors. We skied, snowshoed and tobogganed to victory in the Winter Carnival, not even daunted by the amazing fact that there was snow enough for the event to take place. In the indoor meet we defeated the sophomores, but bowed to the seniors in the upperclass competition. We were elated when training rules for spring sports were made more lenient and we were permitted an extra half-hour each evening to solve the riddles of the universe or prove Mr. Work's fallibility as a bridge exponent. Our elation carried us to victory in the first spring Field Day. Our honor in individual sport was upheld by Jean Poindexter, who showed no respect for Colonel Bogie in the golf tournament. Closing the year with a final burst of glory, our Okitata won the first boat race on Float Night,—a circumstance so upsetting that the firework W was burned upside down.

We were victorious in our junior fall Field Day, winning first places in hockey, basketball and golf. Winter Carnival brought us still further honor when we not only tied with 1927 for the cup, but also presented the noble and historic pageant of "Washington Crossing the Delaware." In the indoor athletics, however, our pride accompanied our tumbling artists in a fall, for the Lincoln Challenge Cup was won by 1927. Our spring sports teams retrieved our fortunes by coming out on top in the Field Day games, and Float Night saw the final victory of the year when both our crews won first place, after close and hard-fought races.

During junior year the constitution of the Athletic Association was revised, and a new hand-book, the A. A. Blue Book, was issued. The most important change provided that the Executive Board of the Association should assume office in the spring, after the Indoor Meet.

We wonder if any athletic event was ever better managed and more enjoyed than our senior fall Field Day. A novel event was the student-faculty baseball game from which the faculty, victorious by the score of five to zero, emerged to win the coveted measuring cup and yellow paper chrysanthemums. The contestants in the various sports were encouraged by strains from a kazoo band, but 1928 reacted most successfully to the music, gaining first place in riding, hockey, and volleyball. We are very glad to give the credit for this best of Field Days to our president, Antoinette Deppeler.

One Wellesley Alumna writes:--

"I want my daughter to learn the right way to dress—how to buy her own clothes. When she goes to your shop I feel a growing confidence that she will not return home over-dressed or over-spent."

—and for the girl out in the world—the bachelor girl in business or the professions—the married girl at home—the same Slattery good taste fashions, with the opportunity to pay little or much as she chooses—in Slattery specialized shops at Wellesley, Brookline, or Boston.

If these are the thoughts that flit through your mind when Europe and Summer are mentioned, we are the people to see—because the is meant to take projected trips that are no more than mental and arrange them to suit the traveler's fancy. This includes making steamship and hotel reservations and sightseeing arrangements, securing train accommodations, passport visas, etc., and in short assuming all the burdens of a European trip that one would expect of a travel organization, as well as many unusual services in the way of suggestions about routes, places to see and places to eat, etc. Our "Guide to European Travel" tells all about it.

Old Natick Inn

And comes that time, as come it must,
When, from your feet, you shake the dust
Of Wellesley's well-nigh sacred ground,
Let no alumna e'er be found
Whose tortured conscience hides the sin—
"I never supped at Natick Inn."
For she who breathes the Old Town air
And dines on the Old Inn's wholesome fare,
Returns again in future years,
With memories undimmed by tears.
This is the legend, heed it well—
For the Old Inn casts a magic spell.

THE STORK BOOK

By Newton Newkirk

Here's a book everybody will enjoy. Babies are a great mystery to most of us, but Newt thinks that he is fully qualified to write about babies because he NEVER owned one himself, and Newt knows nothing whatever about them. He admits, however, that they are important, since the greatest men and women the world has ever known were one time babies themselves. What Newt doesn't know about babies would fill a book—and this is the book. Just the gift for newlyweds or about-to-be-married friends. There's a hearty laugh in every page and a chuckle in every picture. You will enjoy Newkirk's stories, so send for this one today. Price postage prepaid only 50c.
